

Abstract

The present paper discusses the latest development in capital market law concerning the field of market abuse. First of all key elements concerning the European legislative shall be explained via the current European market abuse directive (MAD II) and market abuse regulation (MAR). The primary focus will be placed on the German implementation of these European acts in the national law. It will be reviewed to what extent the German implementation of these laws comply with or even exceed the European standards.